Welcome to All Saints’
Most weekends of my childhood were spent on the gulf of Mexico in a magical place called Ocean Springs. Grassy bluffs dip into the bay and oak trees stretch their massive, mossy arms toward the sandy beaches. Azaleas, irises, and fragrant lilies form ribbons of color along property lines edged in pine trees. Pelicans, storm birds and seagulls float along the water’s edge. Sailboats slide through the protected sound and locals fish off of bridges.

Fridays at noon, our Dutch grandmother would take my sisters and me out of school and drive us, along with several family dogs, to East Beach. Shoes were kicked off upon arrival and didn’t make an appearance again until Sunday. At church, we sat with Grandmama in the very front pew. She said it was for her hearing, but additionally, there was no room for misbehaving.

There was nothing pious or overly religious about Grandmama. She kept champagne in the icebox for drop-in visitors and taught us to dance the Charleston. Grandmama also refused to leash her dogs which resulted in regular visits from the local police. She had a glass of wine every sunset on the pier while we dangled upside-down on the bowsprit of my grandfather’s boat. She asked us to illegally hop fences to save rare native plant species. Ocean Springs was a place where imagination soared high and God was present everywhere. There was freedom from the brokenness of the human world.

My grandmother was a precious, lively gift. She taught us that enjoyment of life is one of the tenets of survival, and that oftentimes, ethics are more important than rules.

She and my mother lie side-by-side in a bluff in Ocean Springs overlooking the bay, but I see her and her spirit all around All Saints’.

Welcome.

FAMILY SAFETY SUNDAY
Sunday, October 28

As part of our special safety day, Tiny Church, Explorers, NEST and CAST members will practice safe emergency drill procedures with a practice fire evacuation during the 10 am hour. Under adult supervision, children will leave their classrooms and cross the street to gather in the cactus garden. Parents should still sign their student(s) in and look for them to return to the church before communion. There will also be a free Child Identification Card and Fingerprint service on the patio courtesy of New York Life. In keeping with our safety procedures and emergency precautions, we would like all children and youth emergency forms turned in by All Saints’ Sunday. Get your forms in to get your official name tag, get updated in our system and get on the birthday list. After 11/4, children will need to sit with parents until forms are completed. Contact Karlyn Johnson Brown, Director of Children, Youth and Family Ministries at kjohnson@allsaintsbh.org for more information.

• We have reached out to everyone who has been recommended to us.
