Entering Into Lent

Twice in the past two years, I’ve had scary encounters with masked men wielding knives. I remember them with gratitude, however, since they are orthopedic surgeons to whom I paid hundreds of dollars (thanks to good insurance) to perform shoulder replacements. The horizontal recovery period gave me a chance to ponder pain that we choose voluntarily, sometimes for our own good.

While rehabilitating, I persisted in choosing pain because I knew that working through the soreness would allow my shoulders to regain their full benefits.

By submitting myself to the physicians’ authority, I trusted that they had my best interest in their scope -- I trusted that my health and wholeness was their primary goal and purpose. The physician/patient relationship has been chosen through the years of being the best analogy to God’s approach to us, especially as we enter into Lent.

During the coming weeks we will not so much hear about a penal God who wants to punish us in our sin, but one who wants to come alongside us as a physician, diagnose us as needing mercy, and begin the restorative process of healing. Sometimes it hurts! But in the end, we receive a life of renewed mobility and original intention.

First, we hear about God’s authority in this relationship by claiming God as the “Transfigured Christ” who fulfills and transcends the law and the prophets. It is such a one who can restore us, and, thus, we celebrate this Sunday with our Shrove Sunday Brunch. And beginning with Ash Wednesday (this week, March 6), we enter the season of solemn remembrance — that life which has been cast down is being raised up, and hearts that have been rended are now being mended. And as we move through the first few weeks of Lent, the stories become more poignant as to our need of God’s forgiving nature. It’s a story not to be missed!

Welcome to All Saints’. Join us as we conclude the Season of Epiphany and begin Lent. And more importantly, join Christ in the journey of love and forgiveness each and every day.

Interim Rector
